Okello was over enjoyed when he bought a car. It was Mark II registration No. UPK 205K. It was a new car from a trusted dealer in Kapchorwa town.

When he reached home, his friend told him to take the car to the garage for checking to ensure it was in good condition before driving anywhere else. This was good advice. Okello, however, did not take it. He only said that he would take the car to his work place and show off by offering a lift to all his work-mates on their way back home.

Early in the morning, he set off, cruising with a whistle. On his way to the office, the new car started to make some funny noise. Okello got out of the car and tried to check under it for any causes of noise. He didn't see anything. His attempt to start the car again is what surprised him. The car could not start. After several trials, he called his friend and told him what had happened.

While waiting for his friend and the mechanic Okello, unhappy and unsatisfied called the car dealer. The car dealer reminded him that even new cars need to be checked before driving them.

Shortly, his friend arrived with a mechanic, and they together checked the car. The mechanic told them that the vehicle needed engine oil to lubricate it and driving without it had damaged the engine, therefore it should be over-hauled before putting the required oil.

Mr. Nyanzi is a teacher at Lolly and Jolly Primary school. He has a Suzuki car which he uses to go to school without being late. However, this car gives him hard time because its mechanical condition is not good. Sometimes it fails to start in the traffic jam and this makes the traffic flow very difficult.

Last Saturday, he decided to take it to the mechanic at Musa Hussein Garage in Wandegeya. The mechanic checked it and told him that he needed to replace some parts which were old and spoilt. Some of the parts he needed to replace included; the brakes, the radiator and the gear box. The engine needed cleaning. He needed also to buy a new battery. The mechanic was so good that he even directed him to the shop where he could get better spare parts. They went together to Kisekka market and bought all the parts he needed. The mechanic repaired the car very well and Mr. Nyanzi is the happiest man now.
