SECTION B

51. Read the poem below carefully and answer the questions that follow in full sentences.

Oh! White ants! Oh! White ants!
Your permanent home is the anthill,
Your guards are the termites,
Red and brown they are.
You trust their work, Because they help you to build your house.

The queen in her nest lays the eggs,
Young and old in colonies you live,
When dawn breaks,
You move in the air using wings,
As humans and birds wait,
To catch and sentence you to death.

You breathe in and out through spiracles
On your stomach they are found,
The only meat without bones,
Entomologists say you are a source of proteins,
So important to our health you are. (By Kasepiki Anthony)
